SHERIFF WHIPPLE MAKES SEN-
TENTIAL RAID IN MILTON
JUNCTION WEDNESDAY EVENING.

EVIDENCE IS SECURED

Of Alleged Sale of Liquor Without a License—Hearing Set for January 2.

Three Blind Pigs! Three Blind Pigs! Oh, they were raided Wednesday night by Sheriff Whipple and locked up tight.

Three Blind Pigs! Three Blind Pigs! Sheriff Whipple did not stop to consider that it was Christmas Eve on Wednesday night last when he headed his raid on the three alleged resorts in Milton Junction. He did not stop to think that perhaps his closing of these places that have existed on and off for years past, would mean that there would be no Christmas cheer in the Junction. He made his raid and as a result H. N. Haviland, of the Morgan House, H. Hartman, of the St. Paul House and Charles Lumm, appeared before Judge Mixfield this morning and pleaded not guilty to the charge made and their trial was set for January 2.

Armed with three warrants issued on the night of W. P. Marquart, chairman of the Milton town board, the sheriff and deputies W. R. Wogan, William Dulin, P. Baker and Roy Whipple made their trip on to Milton Junction Christmas Eve. The raid was carefully planned and Whipple, with his force, did not overlook any of the liquor and swooped down upon the unsuspecting places and caught them with the goods.

The raiding party left this city on the six-fifty o'clock train but did not arrive in Milton Junction until after midnight. The deputies broke up two parties making separate raids to prevent the other proprietors from getting "tips" to get ready for the men. Sheriff Whipple and Turnkey went to the Morgan House and at entrance were met by D. N. Haviland, owner of the hotel. When Whipple told the owner of his errand and that he was coming to his place, he said: "Well, gentlemen, I am at your mercy," and took Whipple and Wogan into a back room where there was a small bar, a slot machine and dice, all together making up the place. Several gallons of whiskey were found and nearly a gallon was drawn from a barrel. The raiders also found twelve bottles of beer.

The other party, consisting of Dulin, Roy Whipple and Baker, went immediately to the St. Paul House up the street from the Morgan House and found the owner, H. Hartman, at home, but rather incensed with the unexpected call. The hotel was searched and the party found three cases of beer, a small amount of whiskey in the rear room of the hotel. Yesterday morning E. C. Leuker, a bartender at the St. Paul House, was down to Janesville on the first train and went to the Rock county jail and demanded that the sheriff hand over to him two cases of beer that was a Christmas present to him and that he had left in the basement of the St. Paul House. According to Leuker, a merry Christmas celebration was being held at the St. Paul House, and all the liquor the party wanted for the raid on the Charles Lumm place, a private dwelling near the St. Paul House.

When the raiders rapped for admittance, no answer came and after surrounding the place they forced their entrance through a window. Dulin, backed by Sheriff Whipple, armed with a revolver, crawled through the window and unlocked the door. The owner was out making a call and the place was thoroughly searched. A quantity of sin and whiskey was found and many empty bottles, a few of which were taken as evidence. This completed the raid, and as the owners of the blind pigs were properly holders, were not taken to the Rock county jail, but told to appear at the Janesville municipal court this morning. Lumm could not be found but within half an hour after the sheriff had returned to Janesville, he received a telephone call from Lumm who said, "Understand and know by the looks of things, you were at my house and what am I to do. He was to make his appearance before the Janesville court Friday.

The liquor, consisting of about six dozen bottles of beer, a dozen bottles and several gallons of whiskey, and some sin, was brought back to Janesville by the party and will be brought before court for evidence when the cases are heard.

OBITUARY

D. H. Jenkins, a former resident of Lima and Jefferson, Wisconsin, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. C. Smith, at Armstrong, Iowa, of heart failure, December 27, 1822, at Woodville, New York, where he lived for thirty-eight years. On Feb. 9th, 1843, he was married to Mary E. Ellsworth. Their children were born at Lima, Wisconsin, two boys and two girls. Both boys died in infancy. One of the daughters, Mrs. Cora Spangle, of San Francisco, died Aug. 13th, 1900.

He was in 1860 when Mr. Jenkins moved his family to Wisconsin, where he settled in Jefferson. He was called to the war to defend his nation, and he fought bravely, fighting many hardships through the fierce struggle. Later he moved to Lima, Wisconsin, where he lived for seventeen years. He was a member of the United Brethren church and he also held the positions of health officer and town treasurer for many years.

In 1903 Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins moved to Armstrong, Iowa, where they have since resided with their daughter. The funeral services were held at the home of his daughter, at which service his pastor, Rev. Alonzo Pruitt, officiating.

Mrs. Margaret E. Stewart.

Mrs. Margaret E. Stewart of Rockford, formerly Miss Margaret Forde of Edgerton, passed away at the Rockford hospital in Christmas day. Mrs. Stewart was a member of the Janesville lodge, No. 106, Mystic Workers of the World. Funeral services will be held at Edgerton from her daughter's residence on Saturday at two o'clock.

ICE ON GAS POND ENABLES SKATERS TO ENJOY PASTIME

For the past week, skaters in the city have been using the gas pond as their means of sport. The ice is not as thick as it might be to insure safety, as there is still danger of the skating at that place. As the river is covered only slightly, there should be a warning to the skaters to keep off the Rock for the present at least.

SHORT CHANGE MEN
FOUND ONE VICTIM

Make Get Away With Ten Dollars at One Janesville Store During Christmas Rush.

Short change men have been working in Janesville and Beloit during Christmas week and two men fled from the manager of the Wear-U-Well shoe store out of $10 Tuesday, complaints being made to the police Wednesday night. Two men answering to the description given by the Janesville force by the manager, had tried to work the game in Beloit but were detected and they left the city.

The plan worked by the men was rather simple but the rush during the week made their graft successful. Shortly after six o'clock on Tuesday night, two men went into the shoe store and asked for an article that was not kept in stock. By interesting the clerk in conversation they gained his confidence.

In going out from the store they made the purchase of a shoe, said the outfit costing thirty cents. The clerk was handed a twenty dollar bill for payment. He explained to the men that he could change the bill but would cut him short by about three other man then politely offered to change a smaller bill. The clerk gave the first man two fives and a ten who in turn made change with the partner. After the money had changed hands the first man offered to change back the bill his partner giving him some notes for a private debt, stating that he did not wish to carry all the bills as his wife would find them and he could hide the twenty. The clerk agreed and gave him the bill back and was given the supposed twenty dollars with a five dollar note on top. He failed to notice that there were three extra notes being given five one dollar and one five dollar note. The work was rather close and only the hurry of the clerk to wait on other customers, enabled the short change men to get away with the ten spot. The men were described as being well dressed, smooth shaven and weighed about 170 and 190 and wore black overcoats and black derby hats.

Arnold gave each of the young women the "excellent" mark. "But," said the other inspector, "surely they are not all as good as they can be; some must be better than others." "Perhaps that is so," replied Arnold; "but then, you see, they are all such very nice girls."

Sport Snap Shots

It is being observed on every hand that the youngsters and kids in the American league are putting it all over the National league. The reason seems to be just that—because the American league is full of kids. More real young stars have been uncovered in the American league in the past season than at any other period of the same for many seasons past. 'T would be folly to point famed for his acting, singing, and also for his ball playing, was born in the little town of Royston, Ga., on December 13, 1886, of poor but honest stock. He started his professional baseball career in 1904 with a nick team known as the Anniston Alabama-Tennessee league team. In the latter part of that same season he was traded to Augusta of the South Atlantic league and finished the season with an average at bat of .237. The season following, however, he made a bad start, and, pouncing the pill from the line of .226, it was in his second season that the big league scouts began to look Tyrus over and toward the end of the summer of 1907 he was grabbed by Detroit, where, as we all know, he has played ever since. In his first season with the Tigers Cobb batted but a measly .240, but the next year he batted .320 and won the respect and regard of all the pitchers he faced. He has been hitting at that clip and then some ever since. In 1911 he bettered his record a bit by batting .420 and managed to hit above .400 the season following. He was anxious to make it three seasons straight of over .400, but last year fell short with .390, which, however, is doing very well indeed. But his average for the nine seasons in the big league is something like .371, which is way ahead of anything ever done before. On his recent twenty-seventh birthday, T. gave out bulletins as to his health and declared that he never felt better in his life. As he is now twenty-seven years old and has been in the big show for nine years, anyone real quick at figures will discover that he was but eighteen years old when he made his major league debut.

They don't have baseball "million dollar beauties" in merry England, but they have football stars that sell at about the same rate. George Utey, the famous Barnsley halfback star, was transferred to the Sheffield United team on a payment of $10,000. Also the Blackburn Rovers paid a similar amount for Dan Shea of Weatham and Chelsea is said to have paid quite a bit more for Tom Logan. The professional football game is a big feature in England, while in this country, of course, it's all in the colleges.

LONG BICYCLE GRIND GREAT PASTIME WITH GOTHAM SPORTSMEN

Only Town Able to Support Six-Day Marathon, Turning Over Thousands of Dollars for Annual Event.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Dec. 26.—Some queer things are done in the name of art, but if art has anything on poor old sport in New York when it comes to having things "put over on it" there will have to be a rising of the sun long before sun-up. Mr. G. Sport, in whose name football, baseball and a few other pastimes are presented, is just beginning to revive from the effects of the annual snoring it got in New York. For one week Madison Square Garden was used as a cat-dron in which all the good that there is in sport was boiled to a finish, and over the head of the crowd the surface and permitted to reign supreme.

New York has its annual debauch in sport in the six-day bicycle race. There is only one town in the country that would support such an annual event. That town is New York. The gangster and gunman, for whom the town is famous, desert the beaten paths and appear in the open during the running of this race. That is the reason for the race. But New Yorkers support the event. They turn over thousands of dollars every year to see the riders plug unceasingly hour after hour and day after day about the saucer track. There are the regulars who take their place in the gallery at the start and never leave, unless the police clear the place. Then they politely walk to the window, buy another ticket and return to their seats. They sleep in their chairs and subsist on "hot dogs" for the week. They will sit for hours watching the endless grind under the worst atmospheric conditions that can be imagined.

That two men, working in relays, can ride six days without stopping and cover more than 2,000 miles, speaks much for their physical condition, but that human beings can remain in the garden for a week and merely live, without the added exertion of constant riding is a tenth wonder of the world. The lungs would be justified in staging a rebellion that would tear the lining out of the body they are forced to inhabit. Great clouds of tobacco smoke sweep over the Garden as the crowd endures for the first night. As the week wears on other clouds are furnished. Then comes the stale smell of burning hemp. It would take a blast of dynamite to dent the air through this same thing every year and evidently like it. The riders are paid from $50 to $250 for every day they stay in the race. The prize for winning is paltry compared with the effort involved, being about $1,500. From the start, however, the watchers pick their favorites. The only features of a six day race are the sprints and the spills. That is what the crowd goes to see. Hours they pass and nothing will happen. But it may happen any minute and that ingrown curiosity, the spark in humanity which con-

BELOIT FIVE TRIMS JANESVILLE CARDS IN EXCITING TILT

Beloit Ironquils Club Leads Local Team Throughout Game, Winning After Hard Battle, by 20 to 13.

Star work by Korst of Janesville, on the Beloit squad, and the team work of the two starting brothers, brought victory to the Beloit Ironquils club in their clash with the Janesville Cardinals at the rink. Christmas night, by a 20 to 13 score. The visitors looked up strong and well equipped for team work and Janesville showed miserable form at shooting baskets, missing enough goals to win several games.

put up a spirited battle to cinch the game. The Cards opened up with field work that had the Ironquils guessing and were within two points of the leaders at one stage of the period. The Gharrity brothers proved the stumbling block again this half, their rushing game getting the ball out of dangerous territory to their forwards. Both teams were showing the strain of playing for the first time this year and in the last few minutes of play, fast team work was prevented by the team's close guarding.

Janesville Cardinals—Edler, center; Atwood and Cunningham, forwards; Falter, French and Dalton, guards; Deloit—Prenkle, center; T. Gharrity, Ryan and E. Gharrity, guards; Berger, Korst and B. Gharrity, forwards. Baskets—Korst 7; Edler, 3; Dalton, Cunningham, Atwood, Ryan, Prenkle and E. Gharrity, 1. Foul goals—Edler, 1. Referee—Koca. Halves—Twenty minutes.

A Stupendous and Gigantic Spectacle
Grand Street Parade at Noon

There Will Be Something Doing Every Minute.
Nothing Like It Ever Seen Before.

Continual Concerts By Two Bands

The mammoth combined shows will outrival anything of like nature ever conceived. There will be a large number of Dazzling, Bewitching, Glimmering Attractions.

Side-Splitting Burlesques On Timely Topics

Here you'll laugh sixty times every sixty seconds. Come and see the Funniest Freaks from the Four Quarters of the Globe.

Magnificent Menagerie of the World's Mightiest Monsters

Fierce, Ferocious, Terrible Beasts of the jungle trained to do everything but talk; absolutely under the subjugation of an utterly fearless trainer. An awe inspiring, wonderful sight.

See September Morn and September Evening.

This famous subject that has come under so much discussion will be shown in exact reproduction of the original model for the famous picture.

Vicious, Venomous, Ravenous Reptiles

Huge Snakes from Asia, India, Africa, brought here at great expense. The temperature in the dens of these mighty representatives of the reptilian world must be kept at an even degree or the reptiles will perish from the cold.

Dazzling Dances of Bewildering Brilliance.

The Dances of the Nations, truly a wonderful view No expense has been spared on this act.

Sweet Voiced Singers From the Sunny South.

All the old-fashioned melodies rendered in the inimitable style of the Southern Dandy. This act will be one of the features of the entire show. See these jolly, black face boys buck and winging; come and hear their banjos ringing.

The Only Tattooed Colored Man in the World.

This man is a novel sight. He was born in New Zealand and for years subjected his body to the pains of the tattooer's needle until today his entire skin is tattooed in every conceivable figure.

Sim and Sam, the Solid Siamese Twins

Born in Siam, brought to this country four years ago, have been with the foremost circuses and are now brought here for this big show.

See the Old Year Out in a Riot of Fun. Welcome the New Year In On a Wave of Laughter.

Don't miss this show. The Biggest Event of the entire year. Expense has not been spared to make this a grand, glorious, gorgeous, good time for everyone who attends.

Don't Forget the Dates, December 30th and 31st.
Admission, 10c.

Grand Free Street Parade at Noon

It has been decided to leave Old Baldy, the huge pachyderm, the elephant of marvelous ability, out of the parade because the immense weight of this ponderous animal could not be supported by any of the bridges. He has to be carried in a specially constructed railroad car. But leaving Baldy out, the parade will be a delightful spectacle.

THE STORY OF MEXICAN OIL.

So much has been said about "oil" being the issue in Mexico, as the cause of all the trouble that the following scrap of history from the World's Work is of interest.

"About thirteen years ago an enterprising gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Edward L. Doheny, made a trip to the then undeveloped Mexican oil fields. The Mexican Oil company, a corporation made up largely of Los Angeles men, was the result; it leased land and obtained subsoil rights from Mexican farmers, and soon was making money. The oil at first was not of an especially high quality, but was useful for fuel, especially on railroads. Higher grades, suitable for lighting, however, soon made their appearance. The market was right there in Mexico; petroleum, because it had to be imported from the United States, was selling at extravagant prices. The news of the new oil fields spread rapidly; the whole coast in the Tampico region seemed to be fairly reeking with it.

"The possible exhaustion of oil supplies is a ghost that haunts the industrial world today. It is no secret that the Standard Oil company, a few years ago, was almost in a panic over the rapidly diminishing product of its oil fields and that the discovery of oil in California, Oklahoma, and other places saved it from actual embarrassment. It is not strange, therefore, that there Mexican disclosures caused a sensation.

"From surface indications, the Mexican supply seemed inexhaustible; and there were plenty of prophets who foresaw the day when these new gushers would supply the larger part of the world. The Waters-Pierce company, of Texas, promptly stepped over the border and began producing and refining Mexican oil. And almost immediately the production of the Mexican fields increased. In 1906, Mexico produced practically no oil at all—now it stands next to Russia and the United States.

The same writer asserts that New York is the capital of Mexico, and says:

"The largest financial stake in Mexico is not Mexican at all, but foreign. And of this foreign interest, the largest part is American. On this subject statistics are numerous but confusing. Judging from the attempts that several authorities have made to answer the question, 'What is the amount of American investments in Mexico?' and the conflicting nature of the replies, the question is not readily answerable. The figures range all the way from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000. One difficulty is that many of the largest investments—they are rather international in character. This is true of the largest investment of all, the railroads. The casual traveler in Mexico at once puts down the railroads as American investments. With a few exceptions Americans built them all. They are American in engineering and construction. The rolling stock is American; one rides in 'cars' and not in 'carriages,' spends the night in 'sleepers,' not in 'wagon-lits.' The presidents and nearly all the executive officers are Americans. And the American negro still maintains his empire as Pullman porter. An American banking house, Speyer and company, acts as fiscal agents of the national system. Yet, when things are analyzed more in detail, Europeans are the largest holders in Mexican railroad securities.

"But, whatever the actual facts of investment may be, the people who are doing the work of 'opening up' Mexico everywhere are mainly Americans. Mexican commerce, with the United States, likewise, enormously exceeds that with any other foreign nation; the tables of trade statistics, indeed, show that the United States imports and exports more articles than all the rest of the world combined. Industrially and financially considered, the real capital of Mexico is not Mexico City, but New York."

A GRAVE EXPERIMENT.

Under this caption an eastern publication discusses the new currency law which has now become effective.

"However light-heartedly the new banking bill may have been put in final shape, it is the nature of an experiment graver and broader in its character than that which established the national banking system in 1863. It is probably impossible for even the most expert bankers to foretell in advance exactly how the measure will work; or what interpretation will be put on its provisions when subjected to the acid test of the courts. It is more than likely that flaws and inconsistencies will be discovered which might have been rectified if expert aid had been invoiced and carefully considered, even at the last moment.

"Bankers have made a consistent and justifiable fight for the removal of the crudities in the first draft of the bill and for the correction of unsound provisions from time to time injected into it. They have succeeded in modifying the element of politics which seemed likely to enter into the composition of the Federal Reserve Board by securing a larger number of members who are not officials. They have obtained also an adequate gold reserve against notes. They have eliminated the dangerous guarantee of deposits. It lies with the national banks to make or break the system.

"But in breaking it they would run serious risk of breaking down the entire financial mechanism of the country. With the same spirit which animated them during the Civil war, they are likely to swallow individual prejudices and do their best to aid in making the new system effective. Their co-operation will be of the highest importance, especially during the next two years while the shifting of reserves to the new federal reserve banks is going on.

"The names of the men who are to serve on the federal reserve board will be awaited by the business community with more anxiety probably than were the names of the members of the president's cabinet. Upon the character and capacity of their men depends to a great extent the wise use or the abuse of the great powers which are conferred upon them. If the board is made up of scatter-brained politicians, ready to listen approvingly to the clamor for more money from those who have no proper security or credit, the country may soon be plunged into an era of paper inflation as disastrous and humiliating as any through which the South American republics have passed in times gone by. The power to suspend reserve requirements, which still seems to be a part of the bill, is a most dangerous one. Fortunately, it is being down in the bill of a definite system of taxation upon the impairment of note reserves removes the excuse for suspension unless in highly unusual emergencies.

"Obviously, to avoid such perils, a solemn duty is imposed upon President Wilson to choose men of the most conservative views and the most intimate knowledge of the banking history of the world, in selecting the federal reserve board."

WHEN SHEPHERDS WATCHED.

The Wall Street Journal preached a little Christmas sermon in its editorial columns on Christmas morning. It was just a touch of the spirit of the season. Just a bit of a spiritual talk in the midst of the wordy discussions on tariff and currency.

"With the changing seasons the world, in everything essential, remains the same. The problems of humanity do not change, because human nature is what it has been as far back as human record tells. There are superficial changes, where men make laws that they may the better live together in peace and good will. The human heart is essential to all progress and beyond all laws. Reform starts there, and not in the halls of legislation.

"Once a year the world halts to take note of the flight of time. There are other calendars, besides the Christian, but no era which has made so tremendous an impress upon the minds of men. At the head of Wall street, looking down, tranquil and unmoved, upon the most criticized and least understood section of a great nation, stands the spire of Trinity. Its bells are ringing the old familiar Christmas hymns. The shepherds are watching their flocks again, all seated on the ground. It is the grievous misfortune of him who hears the bells, if the glory of the Lord shine not round about him.

"There is little that laws can do to make men happier, or richer, or more contented. There is no form of government today without its parallel and warning in the past. There is none in the past of which it could not be said that only righteousness exalted a people. The season enforces the old lesson that goodness and justice and sacrifice and love are the foundation of all good government, because in this way alone a people truly governs itself.

"Here then is something permanent that shall remain when the Constitution of the United States may be an interesting study for the archaeologist, and the writings of the day have become classical in a sense their authors never dreamed. The lesson for Wall street, and for all the world, is in the reminder that the foundation is permanent and true because it has in it the element of the divine.

"Of old hast Thou laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of Thy hands. They shall perish, but Thou shalt endure: Yea all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt Thou change them, and they shall be changed. But Thou art the same, and Thy years shall have no end."

THE CALUMET HORROR.

Even in the midst of the Christmas celebrations comes the awful horror of the deaths during the mad panic over a false alarm of fire at Calumet.

Seventy odd men, women and children killed in the mad rush for safety that started on the cry of fire in a crowded hall where a Christmas celebration was in progress. For months Calumet has been an armed camp. A strike is in progress at the largest of the mines there. State troops and armed deputies have patrolled the streets, but in this one great calamity all lines of differences have been forgotten. The miners, the mine owners, the deputies, the soldiers, all are united in the great sorrow. It was a useless waste of human life and the author of this great calamity should be punished.

They Take No Chances.

The Chinese blacksmith thinks a great deal of his anatomy, when shoeing horses, which are not numerous in China. He is so skittish in doing a job of shoeing and so dubious about handling the hoofs of the animal, that, when shoeing is required, the horse is strung up with ropes in such a manner as to prevent kicking. No exceptions are made, even though the horse be a scrawny street plug of advanced age.

On the Spur of the Moment

The Procession. Fair Cornelia came our way, Said she thought she'd like to stay; She claimed that she was never cross or naggy.

In just three days on some pretext She said, "I quit on Tuesday next." We advertised again and got our Maggie.

To keep our Maggie's temper sweet The folks all called her Markuerite; We thought that we had surely found a daisy. Although her cooking was just great, She wouldn't wash a cup or plate. We advertised again and drew a Mazie.

About three days did Mazie last, And other ones came thick and fast; Aracella, Kate and Jane and Nora, And Hyacinth and Annie, too, And Violet and Maud and Lou, Henrietta, Belle and Neil and Flora.

Now we is cookin' all our grub, We have a woman in to scrub, And us kids do the dishes on commission; And father sweeps and dusts and lugs The wood and shakes the parlor rugs. We've given up the servant proposition.

Real Food Substitutes. The eminent scientists who are busily engaged in inventing new foods to take the place of those which they claim will soon be barred by the high cost of living are wasting their efforts, because nobody is ever going to take a very deep interest in food that is injected into the arm or taken from the vest pocket in tabloid form. The man who invented a tablet which contains a whole New England boiled dinner evidently meant well, but people don't like and never will like to eat that way.

The fact of the matter is that substantial food is still to be had if a man is not exceptionally fastidious in his tastes. Good old pork and beans still remain within reaching distance and an eight-ounce can of milk and beans like mother used to make will save of starvation for a considerable length of time. A quarter's worth of codfish, done up in manifold ways possible with that delightfully nutritious and invigorating confection will keep a whole family alive and corn meal mush is as inexpensive and filling as of yore.

A man can't expect to eat filet de mignon and pate de foie gras without paying a fancy price for it. If he eats asparagus in the middle of the winter and endive out of season, he must also expect to ante. If one is satisfied to eat what he can get he had to eat when he was a boy, about one-half of the problem of the high cost of living would be solved for him.

Afterthoughts. The attention of the Society for the Prevention of Unpleasantness is respectfully called to home-made neckties and carpet slippers. John Lind, President Wilson's envoy to Mexico, has spoken at last. He says he has nothing to say. The Texas corn crop amounts to 169,000,000 bushels, which ought to furnish enough whisky to keep Texas going until the next corn crop comes along.

The corn is out at last. Corset makers are attacking the tango because many of the tango dancers do not wear corsets. Scientists are paying a great deal of attention to auto-suggestion; now "The best auto-suggestion by the way, is to buy more gasoline. Fashion journals say that women's skirts will be tighter next season. Then the ladies will have to be thinner, that's all.

Huerta says he is like Napoleon. But Napoleon is dead.

Tribute to the Scriptures.

If anything I have ever said or written deserves the feeblest encomiums of my fellow-countrymen, I have no hesitation in declaring that for their partiality I am indebted, solely indebted, to the daily and attentive perusal of the sacred Scriptures, the source of all true poetry and eloquence, as well as of all good and all comfort.—Daniel Webster.

Opium smuggling was frustrated by the San Francisco police recently, when an ingenious attempt was made to get it into the city jail. Patrick Dougherty stuffed an imitation rubber grape with opium, tied it to the stem of a bunch of real grapes, and carried in the bunch to a woman prisoner. As Dougherty is a probationer, his offense is likely to cost him dear.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF BAYARD VELLER

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly Company.

Further discussion was cut short by the appearance of English Eddie himself, a tall, handsome man in the early thirties, who paused just within the doorway and delivered to Mary a bow that was the perfection of elegance. Mary made no effort to restrain the smile caused by the costume of Mr. Griggs. Yet there was no violation of the canons of good taste, except in the aggregate. From spats to hat, from walking coat to gloves, everything was perfect of its kind. Only there was an overabundance, so that the ensemble was flamboyant. And the man's manners precisely harmonized with his clothes, whereby the whole effect was emphasized and rendered bizarre. Garson took one amazed look and then rocked with laughter.

Griggs regarded his former associate reproachfully for a moment and then grinned in frank sympathy.

"From your costume," Mary suggested, "one might judge that this is purely a social call. Is it?"

"Well, not exactly," Griggs answered with a smile.

"So I fancied," his hostess replied. "So, sit down, please, and tell us all about it."

English Eddie wasted no time.

"Now, look here," he said rapidly, "I've got the greatest game in the world. Two years ago a set of Gothic tapestries worth $300,000 and a set of Fragonard panels worth nearly as much more were plucked from a chateau in France and smuggled into this country."

"Are these things really worth that much?" Garson exclaimed.

"Sometimes more," Mary answered. "Morgan has a set of Gothic tapestries worth half a million dollars."

Griggs went on with his account.

"About a month ago the things I was telling you of were hung in the library of a millionaire in this city. He latched his chair a little closer to the desk and leaned forward, lowering his voice almost to a whisper as he stated his plan."

"Let's go after them. They were smuggled, mind you, and no matter what happens he can't squeal. What do you say?"

Garson shot a piercing glance at Mary.

"It's up to her," he said. Griggs regarded Mary eagerly as she sat with eyes downcast.

Mary shook her head decisively. "It's out of our line," she declared.

"I don't see any easier way to get half a million," Griggs said aggressively.

"If it were fifty millions it would make no difference. It's against the law."

"Oh, I know all that, of course," Griggs returned impatiently. "But if you can—"

"My friends and I never do anything that's illegal. Thank you for coming to us, Mr. Griggs, but we can't go in, and there's an end of the matter."

"But wait a minute," English Eddie expostulated. "You see, this chap Gilder is—"

"Gilder?" Mary exclaimed questioningly.

"Yes. You know who he is—the dry goods man."

Mary, however, had regained her self control, and her voice was tranquil again as she replied:

"I know; but just the same, it's illegal, and I won't touch it. That's all there is to it."

"But half a million!" Griggs exclaimed disconsolately. "There's a stake worth playing for. Think of it!" He turned pleadingly to Garson. "Half a million, Joe!"

The telephone rang, and Mary excused herself. The instant she was out of the room Griggs turned to Garson anxiously.

"It's a cinch, Joe," he pleaded. "I've got a plan of the house. He drew a paper from his breast pocket and handed it to the forger, who studied it with intent, avaricious eyes. "It looks easy," Garson agreed. "It is easy. What do you say?" "I promised Mary never to—"

"But a chance like this! Anyhow come around to the back room at 11:15."

"English Eddie" Griggs. Key's tonight and we'll have a talk. Will you?"

"What time?" "Make it early, say 9."

"I'll come," Garson replied half guiltily. And in the same moment Mary re-entered.

Griggs rose and spoke with an air of regret.

"It's follow the leader," he said, "and since you are against it that settles it."

CHAPTER X.

Garson's Noiseless Gun.

SOMETHING of what was in his mind was revealed in Garson's first speech after Griggs' going.

"That's a mighty big stake he's playing for."

"And a big chance he's taking!" Mary retorted. "No, Joe, we don't want any of that. We'll play a game that's safe and sure."

The words recalled to the forger weird forebodings that had been troubling him throughout the day.

"It's sure enough," he stated, "but is it safe?"

Garson walked to and fro nervously as he answered.

"Spose the bulls get tired of you?"

"Let's go after them. They were smuggled, mind you, and no matter what happens he can't squeal. What do you say?"

Garson shot a piercing glance at Mary.

"It's up to her," he said. Griggs regarded Mary eagerly as she sat with eyes downcast.

Mary shook her head decisively. "It's out of our line," she declared.

"I don't see any easier way to get half a million," Griggs said aggressively.

"If it were fifty millions it would make no difference. It's against the law."

"Oh, I know all that, of course," Griggs returned impatiently. "But if you can—"

"My friends and I never do anything that's illegal. Thank you for coming to us, Mr. Griggs, but we can't go in, and there's an end of the matter."

"But wait a minute," English Eddie expostulated. "You see, this chap Gilder is—"

"Gilder?" Mary exclaimed questioningly.

"Yes. You know who he is—the dry goods man."

Mary, however, had regained her self control, and her voice was tranquil again as she replied:

"I know; but just the same, it's illegal, and I won't touch it. That's all there is to it."

"But half a million!" Griggs exclaimed disconsolately. "There's a stake worth playing for. Think of it!" He turned pleadingly to Garson. "Half a million, Joe!"

The telephone rang, and Mary excused herself. The instant she was out of the room Griggs turned to Garson anxiously.

"It's a cinch, Joe," he pleaded. "I've got a plan of the house. He drew a paper from his breast pocket and handed it to the forger, who studied it with phases. "Just what do you mean by that?" Mary demanded, suspiciously.

"For rough work," he said, "I have this." He took a magazine pistol from his pocket. It was of an odd shape, with a barrel longer than usual and a bell-shaped contrivance attached to the muzzle.

"No, no, Joe," Mary cried. "None of that—ever!"

"Pooh!" The forger exclaimed. "Even if I used it, they would never get on to me. See this?" He pointed at the strange contrivance on the muzzle.

"What is it? I have never seen anything like that before."

"Of course you haven't. I'm the first man in the business to get one, and I'll bet on it. I keep up with the times." He was revealing that fundamental egotism which is the characteristic of all his kind. "That's one of the new Maxim silencers. With smokeless powder in the cartridges, and the silencer on, I can make a shot from my coat pocket, and you wouldn't even know it had been done. And I'm some shot, believe me."

"Impossible!" Mary ejaculated. "No, it ain't. Here, wait, I'll show you."

"Good gracious, not here!" Mary exclaimed in alarm. "We would have the whole place down on us."

Garson chuckled.

"You just watch that dinky little vase at the table across the room there. That's very valuable, is it?"

"No," Mary answered.

In the same instant, while still her eyes were on the vase, it fell in a cascade of shivered glass to the table and floor. She had heard no sound, she saw no smoke. Perhaps, there had been a faintest clicking noise. She stared dumfounded for a few seconds, then turned her bewildered face toward Garson, who was grinning in high enjoyment.

"Near little thing, ain't it?" the man asked, exultantly.

"Where did you get it?" Mary asked. "In Boston, last week. And between you and me, Mary, it's the only model, and it sure is a corker."

That night in the back room of Blinkey's English Eddie and Garson sat with their heads close together over a table.

"A chance like this," Griggs was saying, "a chance that will make a fortune for all of us."

"It sounds good," Garson admitted, wistfully.

"Well," urged Griggs, "what do you say?"

"How would we split it?"

"Three ways would be right," Griggs answered. "One to me, one to you and one to be divided up among the others."

Garson brought his fist down on the table with a force that made the glasses jingle.

"You're on," he said, strongly.

"Fine!" Griggs declared, and the two men shook hands. "Now, I'll get—"

"Get nothing!" Garson interrupted. "I'll get my own men. Chicago Red is in town. So is Dacey, with perhaps a couple of others of the right sort. I'll get them and we'll turn the trick tomorrow night."

"That's the stuff," Griggs agreed, greatly pleased.

But a sudden shadow fell on the face of Garson. He bent closer to his companion and spoke with a fierce intensity that brooked no denial.

"She must never know."

Griggs nodded understandingly.

Mary had gone to her bedroom for a nap. She was not in the least surprised that Dick had not yet returned, though he had mentioned half an hour. At the best there were many things that might detain him—his father's absence from the office, difficulties in making arrangements for his projected honeymoon trip abroad—which would never occur—or the like. At the worst there was a chance of finding his father promptly, and of that father as promptly taking steps to prevent the son from ever again seeing the woman who had so indiscreetly married him.

Yet somehow Mary could not believe that her husband would yield to such paternal coercion. Rather, she was sure that he would prove loyal to her whom he loved through every trouble. At the thought a certain wistfulness pervaded her and a poignant regret that this particular man should have been the one chosen of fate to be entangled within her mesh of revenge. There troubled in her a heart tormenting realization that there were in life possibilities infinitely more splendid than the joy of vengeance. She would not confess the truth even to her inmost soul, but the truth was there and set her tremble with vague fears.

She had, slept, perhaps, a half hour when Fannie awakened her. "It's a man named Burke," she explained as her mistress lay blinking. "And there's another man with him. They said they must see you."

By this time Mary was wide awake, for the name of Burke, the police inspector, was enough to startle her out of drowsiness.

She got up, slipped into a tawdry gown, bathed her eyes in cologne, dressed her hair a little and went into the drawing room, where the two men had been waiting for something more than a quarter of an hour—to the violent indignation of both.

"Oh, here you are, at last!" the big, burly man cried as she entered.

"Yes, inspector," Mary replied pleasantly, as she advanced into the room. She gave a glance toward the other visitor, who was of a slenderer form, with a thin, keen face, and recognized him instantly as Demarest, who had taken part against her as the lawyer for the store at the time of her trial, and who was now district attorney.

She went to the chair at the desk and seated herself in a leisurely fashion that increased the indignation of the fuming inspector. She did not ask her self invited guests to sit.

"To whom do I owe the pleasure of this visit, inspector?" she remarked coolly. It was noticeable that she said whom and not what, as if she understood perfectly that the influence of some person brought him.

"I have come to have a few quiet words with you," the inspector declared. Mary disregarded him, and turned to the other man.

"How do you do, Mr. Demarest?" she said evenly. "It's four years since we met, and they've made you district attorney since then. Allow me to congratulate you."

Demarest's keen face took on an expression of perplexity.

"I'm puzzled," he confessed. "There is something familiar, somehow, about you, and yet—"

"Can't you guess?" Mary questioned. "Search your memory, Mr. Demarest. The face of the district attorney lightened.

"Why?" he exclaimed, "you are—it can't be—yes—you are the girl, you're the Mary Turner whom I—oh, I know you now."

"I'm the girl you mean, Mr. Demarest, but, for the rest, you don't know me—not at all!"

"Young woman," Burke said, peremptorily, "the Twentieth Century Limited leaves Grand Central station at 4 o'clock. It arrives in Chicago at 8:55 tomorrow morning. He pulled a massive gold watch from his waistcoat pocket, glanced at it, thrust it back, and concluded ponderously: "You will just about have time to catch that train."

"Working for the New York Central now?" Mary asked blandly.

"You'd better be packing your trunk," the inspector rumbled.

"But why? I'm not going away."

"On the Twentieth Century Limited this afternoon," the inspector declared in a voice of growing wrath.

"Oh, dear, no!"

Another Paradox.

It's a strange fact that a man can be used best as a tool when he is dull.—Boston Transcript.

Neurasthenia.

The neurasthenic is always a person who cannot or will not exercise, while the nervous person is "always on the go." Healthy nerves must be surrounded by healthy muscles, and healthy muscles are the result of exercise. Melancholy persons and those who commit suicide are all in some stage of neurasthenia.

His Symptoms Surely Sinister.

Dinner Stories

The missionary had just induced the Fiji Island ladies to discard those awful rings they wear in their noses. "We ought to sing something appropriate," he said to his assistant. "How about 'Ring Out, Wild Belles'?" answered the latter.

An engineer from Maine was spending a few days in New York with a friend, and after a busy morning sight-seeing, the New Yorker chose a large Broadway restaurant for luncheon, thinking it would be a novel experience for the man from the east.

The visitor appeared to enjoy his luncheon, but kept looking in the direction of the door.

"What are you watching?" asked his friend, rather annoyed.

"Well," was the quiet reply, "I'm keeping an eye on my overcoat."

"Oh, don't bother about that," said the other. "You don't see me watching mine."

"No," observed the guileless engineer, "it's ten minutes since yours went."

Stern Sense of Public Duty.
All "Roman father" records would seem to be eclipsed by the French gendarme whose child was killed at Paris, the other day, by being given a dose of acid in mistake for castor oil. The gendarme immediately arrested his wife for manslaughter by imprudence, and then gave himself up on the charge of contributory negligence, as having been partially responsible because of his own carelessness in exposing the acid, which was used in cleaning his equipment.
